NOTHING AFTER 1788 IS A RIGHT?

The horror is not that the document was leaked. The horror is not even just the striking down of Roe v. Wade. The real horror is that the argument that Justice Samuel Alito is painstakingly documenting is that this was not a right even mentioned by the founders, so it is not a national right.

Well, my friends, using this argument, same-sex marriage is not a right. Interracial marriage is not a right. Women voting is not a right. Heck, laws against slavery are not even a right. This is so much worse than just Roe v. Wade. Under this logic, Brown v. Board of Education is not a right. Title IX is not a right. Social Security and Medicare are not a right. We need to vote as if our lives depend upon it, because our own lives and the life of this country are at stake.

CYCLING TO CRESWELL

In response to Don Richey's 5/5 letter in EW ("November is Coming for Eugene Libs"), I am one of those bicycle huggers, yet not all that much a true lib. I do hope to see the day when the river bike path runs along the south side of the Willamette from the Frohnmayer Footbridge to the Knickerbocker Bicycle Bridge, through Glenwood and on to Mount Pisgah.

The 5/5 EW also featured the restaurant scene in Creswell. My riding mate and I scoped out a back road route from Eugene to Creswell doing a map recon. The proposed ride goes up Fox Hollow Road and over to Camas Swale via Murdock Road. Unfortunately, Murdock Road, a public road, is blocked by an expensive and, I believe, illegal gate.

The county is in the process of creating a bicycle master plan. I hope opening the route from Murdock Road to Camas Swale for at least bicycle access is considered.

... OR JOIN US IN THE KITCHEN FOR TASTY FRIED CHICKEN

Hey, Don Richey ("November is Coming," Letters, 5/5): Those things you listed as egregious that need pushing back against are what the normal majority call reality and progress. Just read actual history and you will see that people always move forward. Even conservatives don't want to go back to outhouses, coal fired furnaces, steam ship travel; they like modernity, just like us liberals. Have you noticed any conservatives giving up their Social Security, Medicare, health care, unemployment checks? Is our meat USDA approved? Are there numerous national parks for us to travel to? I could go on and on.

No, what we are going to see in November is a pushout of people who traffic in conspiracies, gossip, rumors and obvious lies. Those people are not moving us all forward; they are, instead, dividing us as a society, causing mistrust and stress.

I know why conservatives are malcontents: Because their backward looking ideas suck and the only thing they can use to get votes is fear of change. Fear, conspiracies, rumors and lies don't bring "Equity to the picnic" (whatever that means). Workable ideas for the good of us all — truth, logic and compassion, along with tasty fried chicken/potato salad, are what make for a successful picnic. And progress in our society.

So, Don, get your paper plate and join the majority before all the good eats are gone and you're left whining in the rain, as usual.

PUSHING BACK ON PUSHBACK

A question for Don Richey (Letters, 5/5), whose advice to Eugene liberals is as follows: "If you're having a difficult time dealing with pushback, the smart thing to do is stop pushing. Else get out of the kitchen, as it were."

Is that what you do, Don? Doesn't seem like it. Here's my advice to anyone who would follow Richey into his mixed-metaphor kitchen: Never give advice that you yourself would not take. It makes people suspicious.

Or at least, it should.

GOP DOESN'T CARE ABOUT BABIES — JUST VOTES

Abortion was traditionally not a big issue among Republicans, but in the middle 1980s, concerned that making the rich richer wasn't going to attract enough voters, Republicans cynically began to embrace right to life as an issue — not because of a deep, heartfelt concern about unborn children but simply to get votes from the evangelical Christians.

I don't know when life begins, and I certainly don't approve of murdering babies. But this huge concern over abortion seems a little half-baked when these same people seem to be just fine with U.S. policies that result in countless children and adults dying every day from malnutrition, war and neglect.

In my view, the best way to reduce abortion would be to make it safe, legal and extremely rare. We could achieve that by building a sane, functional and equitable society. Instead we're doing just the opposite with wealth distribution worsening, teen suicide rates rising, opioid addiction ravaging communities, social media polarizing society and a small handful of huge corporations spoon feeding us nonsense for information. Perhaps it would help if Christians would start behaving more like that guy Jesus who they're always talking about.

HOT AIR SOCIETY BY TONY CORCORAN

Carpetbaggering Dilettantes Abound!

LET'S HELP THEM VANISH INTO HOT AIR

It's been a hoot to be out and about in the last few weeks and seeing friends again after two years. Open heart surgery and geezer arthritis have slowed me down a bit, but as the Irish say: It's better to be seen than viewed.

I even attended a fundraiser at a "nonpartisan" political event. Now you may ask: What the hell is that? It's an event where you're required to substitute the words "Progressive" for "Democrat" and "Let's Go, Brandon" for "Republican" candidates.

It's also forbidden to release morbid partisan statistics at these events, so I couldn't share my recent New York Times stat that COVID death rates nationwide have been much higher in counties that voted for Donald Trump than those that voted for Joe Biden.

Voters decided that the Lane County commissioner race should be nonpartisan years ago. Apparently, nobody told the candidates or the donors.

I was privileged to speak in support of County Commissioner Heather Buch at a recent house party. I am a constituent and admire her efforts on behalf of working families, rural public safety, the county's homelessness issue and her deft handling of the Holiday Farm fire event: 450 homes up in smoke.

I also thanked Biden and Oregon Secretary of State Shemia Fagan, and the Lane County commissioners for each deciding to hold the primary this year on my birthday! I reflected on how it had been 28 years since their predecessors had similarly honored me in 1994, when I first ran for office. Not many Democrats survived the Newt Gingrich assault that year. And that was way before COVID and Citizens United. Expect a similar attack this year.

Off-presidential election years always require more work on voter turnout, especially the primary. This year should be especially fun because of all the open seats — governor, the 4th and 5th Congressional Districts and the new 6th U.S. congressional seat. It appears we have more candidates than registered voters.

There are 15 Democrats and 19 Republicans running in their primaries for governor, and one rich independent (Betsy Johnson) who will likely face the winners in the general election. It's going to be a three-way race. Remember 1990 when Barbara Roberts snuck past Dave Frohnmyer 46 percent to 40 percent after third party candidate Al Mobley stole 13 percent for the anti-gay Oregon Citizens' Alliance? Johnson is no Al Mobley, but she has been a pro-choice, pro-gun DINO who will draw votes away from the Democrats this time.

Former Speaker Tina Kotek and Treasurer Tobias Read lead the Democratic pack. I'll support the winner in that primary. Because guess who's running to defeat Republican Christine Drazen in her primary — our old asshole union haters Bill Sizemore and Bob Tiernan! They're upset that a wife-swapper is running in their primary. I say "Let's Go, Stan Pulliam!"

My good friend Peter DeFazio leaves a large body of work for his successor with his decision not to run again for Congress. This 4th Congressional District is still a tough district for a Democrat in these skittish times. DeFazio has been there since 1987. There are eight Democrats in the primary. DeFazio has already announced his endorsement: Val Hoyle. She is the most qualified Democrat in the field, having been elected and served in the Oregon House and as majority leader and run for statewide office twice, winning the district by double digits both times, once in a primary and once to statewide office as labor commissioner.

Five of the other Democratic candidates for the 4th district won't even get enough votes to share an Uber unicycle. And of the remaining two, both are carpetbagging dilettantes who have never been elected to anything.

Dull Canning tried to beat DeFazio in the last primary in 2020; she got 15 percent of the vote. And Andrew "Harvard" Kalloch is a real piece of work. He's a corporate lawyer/shill for Airbnb whose campaign is funded by East Coast corporate/gig economy executives. He and his wife were an Oregon Business "Power Couple" recently. Just because he went to Harvard Law with Joseph Kennedy III doesn't mean shit. He's never run for anything in any state on either coast. His campaign mailing address is still in Portland!

There were folks who suspected he was going to try to run against DeFazio back in 2020, but then Canning decided to run. And there were folks who suspected he would run against Peter this time around because of Kalloch's nasty Register-Guard editorial piece calling out DeFazio for "succumbing to cathartic and unprofessional outbursts." This was before DeFazio announced his retirement. GMAFB! As a 25-year constituent, I personally always liked it when Peter spoke truth to power.

Republican Alek Skarlatos is running again as their sole primary candidate, and Trump money is flowing in. DeFazio has very good reasons for endorsing and supporting Val Hoyle: She has the best chance of retaining the seat for a progressive voice. She fits the district. Who better would know? After all, DeFazio is one of the founders of the Congressional Progressive Caucus. The other was Bernie Sanders. ■

[Personal Note: I want to send my condolences to Anita and the Johnson family and the Eugene Weekly family for the loss of their loved one, Art Johnson. Art is in my heart forever for two things: His reminiscing about the United Farmworkers Union hero Dolores Huerta and the San Francisco police of the late '60s, and also the awesome airplane ride he took me on at the end of his flying days a few years ago. The ride over to Newport, then down to Coos Bay and then over the Cascades topped off with a great lunch back at Mahlon Sweet Airport with Art and his co-pilot, another nice guy. A great man, and a great family. Secondly, dear readers — all five of you who are still left — this will be my final column as the elder idiot responsible for both "Insider Baseball" and the "Hot Air Society" diatribes which the Weekly irresponsibly printed. I take no responsibility for what the Weekly printed: You know I know who to blame!]

Thank you, Anita and Ted and Camilla for giving me the opportunity to vent my spleen. Thank you, readers, for all your comments over the years. We've shared many chuckles.]

INCUMBENT JOE BERNEY AND POLITICAL NEWBIE DAVID LOVEALL
SPAR FOR SPRINGFIELD'S LANE COUNTY COMMISSION SEAT

By Henry Houston

Tensions have been high during public debates for the position representing Springfield on the Lane County Board of County Commissioners.

That was on display at a Zoom April 14 Springfield City Club forum. David Loveall, a conservative developer who has taken a lot of credit for Main Street's success, rolled his eyes, shrugged and mouthed comments as incumbent Commissioner Joe Berney spoke.

Berney's own closing arguments targeted Loveall's religious fundamentalism and campaign theme of "skin in the game." Berney said, "Use of this phrase demonstrates no understanding of private interests, the public interests, which county commissioners are supposed to represent and conflicts of interest."

With the May 17 primary election days away, the two candidates are sparring for Position 2. Although county commission seats are nonpartisan, it's a race between the conservative Loveall and liberal leaning Berney.

Berney tells Eugene Weekly that in his first term, he worked to address climate change and encourage working wages and benefits for local construction workers in Lane County — all while dealing with the Holiday Farm Fire, rebuilding the McKenzie River community and the pandemic. And if re-elected he wants to protect Lane County's mobile home residents and re-invent Short Mountain Landfill.

Enlisted by retiring Lane County Commissioner Jay Bozievich, Loveall would not comment to EW on his campaign, but he did talk about his and other Main Street business owners' role in "defending" Springfield from an early Black Lives Matter-related event in 2020. On various podcast programs and debate forums he has claimed the county is providing "toxic charity" to the homeless and has proposed that if elected, he would call for nonprofits to gather at the fairgrounds and pitch to commissioners why they should receive county money.

Joe Berney

Campaigning in his first election in 2018, Berney told EW that he would serve only one term. In a recent interview with EW, he says the county's role as the public health agency for managing COVID-19 and responding to the Holiday Farm Fire showed him the commission's importance. "During that time, I saw how critical a steady hand at the wheel is especially at a time of uncertainty," Berney says. "I see my opponent as the opposite of a steady hand."

During his first term, Berney worked to create a county-wide community benefits agreement protocol, which means the county is committed to taking bids larger than $500,000 only from construction firms that provide employees living wages, full time health insurance and apprenticeships. Berney then worked with state Sen. James Manning to introduce and pass legislation — Senate Bill 420 — that has created a legal framework to make it easier for other government agencies to adopt a community benefits agreement protocol.

The community benefits agreement preferential language is in the county's strategic plan, Berney says. If re-elected he says he'll work to expand it beyond construction bids.

During his first term, Berney says he helped save the Patrician Mobile Home in Springfield, which in 2019 was going to be rezoned to be multi-use so someone could buy it and evict residents. Berney worked with the county's housing authority, Homes for Good, and the statewide housing nonprofit Casa of Oregon to help the residents secure the $100,000 to help the residents buy the property.

Berney says he'll work to create a three-prong permanent solution to avoid future evictions of low-income residents. His plan is to create permanent zoning for manufactured home parks, lobby the Legislature to provide a $100 million revolving loan fund so occupants can purchase mobile home parks to avoid eviction and offer technical assistance for mobile home residents so they can make their park a co-op.

"That will be a critical piece of housing for vulnerable Oregonians," he says. "One piece of state legislation will solve the problem." And as county commissioner, he says he would work with state legislators to pass it.

Another goal is to change Lane County's Short Mountain Landfill, where all of the county's waste ends up, into a recycling and waste to clean energy hub. "That'll occur in a few years if I'm elected," he adds.

According to the Oregon Secretary of State's OreStar database, Berney has raised $147,000 since 2021. Most of his contributions come from organized labor political action committees, such as $12,500 from the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers Local 280 and $10,000 each from Plumbers and Steamfitters Local 221 and Lane County Employees Association AFSCME 2831.

Elected officials who have endorsed Berney include two Springfield city councilors (Steve Moe and Leonard Stoehr), the majority of the Springfield School Board and Willamalane Park and Recreation Board of Directors, state Rep. John Lively, state Sen. Lee Beyer, Bureau of Labor and Industries Commissioner Val Hoyle and Congressman Peter DeFazio. He says he has the support — but not endorsement — of Mayor Sean VanGordon and three other Springfield city councilors.

David Loveall

Loveall would not comment on his platform to EW, but he has spoken about his candidacy at public forums and online shows, such as Bozievich's Boze Noze.

Bozievich is retiring from his seat representing west Lane County in January 2023 and has recruited conservative candidates for the three commissioner seats up for an election in 2022.

Loveall is a co-owner of Masaka Properties along with his wife Nita Loveall. Masaka Properties owns five properties on Springfield's Main Street. He is also a pastor who's written three self-published books about his faith and his views on mental health, and he runs a missionary organization called Three Sixteen Ministries that operates in Uganda.

When BLM-related protests were active in Springfield, some anti-BLM counter-protesters were armed with firearms. There have been allegations that Loveall was one of those counter-protesters. Loveall tells EW that he would not comment on whether he was armed with a weapon, but said during the first two weeks of 2020's BLM-related protests that residents and business owners on Main Street were advised by then-Springfield Police Chief Rick Lewis that "Black Lives Matter and Antifa" were going to burn the city to the ground and that he recommended them to protect their property as they saw fit.

"The police thanked us for having their back and citizens of Springfield thwarted four credible riot events in that first weekend," he says. "The citizens of Springfield will always stand up against those who do violence against their town, including myself."

During the April 14 Springfield City Club meeting, Loveall said that the county's housing first model isn't working, and that the only model that works is the Eugene Mission, citing its wellness model. The county and other nonprofits are creating "toxic charities," he added, also wondering aloud why it was legal for homeless people to own a shopping cart.

Loveall has criticized the county's approach to mental health and who it funds. In the Jan. 13 episode of the Molina Leadership Solutions podcast, Loveall evoked a Shark Tank-like proposition, saying if he's elected he wants to have an event at the Lane County Events Center where social service nonprofits pitch why they should receive county money.

Lane County spokesperson Devon Ashbridge said the county allocates money to nonprofits based on the requirements of the source of the funding, such as state or federal money, and a large amount of it has to go through a proposal process.

Loveall has been endorsed by former Springfield Mayor Christine Lundberg, former Lane County commissioner Steve Cornacchia and former Lane County Sheriff Byron Trapp. Timber Unity, the controversial logging organization, also endorsed him, along with law enforcement groups such as the Thin Blue Line Coalition and Lane County Peace Officers.

According to OreStar, Loveall has raised $142,777 since filing in 2021. Among Loveall's contributions are nearly $40,000 from the Oregon Realtors PAC, $26,667 from Community Action Network, a natural resource extraction-related PAC that supports conservative politicians, and $5,000 from Ed King of King Estate's company Crown Properties. ■

• We're celebrating this week! Former Eugene Weekly intern and Catalyst Journalism Project reporter Ardeshir Tabrizian won second place in investigative reporting in the prestigious Hearst Journalism Awards Program for his story about the death of Eugene resident Landon Payne in local law enforcement custody. Tabrizian is now a writer for the Salem Reporter. As long as we are bragging, former EW intern and freelancer Taylor Griggs is now a staff writer at BikePortland. Former intern Jack Forrest is an E&E News reporting intern for Politico, Ryan Ngyuen, a digital producer at the Seattle Times, is joined there by fellow former EW and Wall Street Journal intern Renata Geraldo, who will be a business reporter. Also a familiar name from EW's pages now in Seattle is Jade Yamazaki Stewart, the editor of Eater Seattle.

• For us TV viewers it was quite a jolt to see a "Betsy Johnson for Governor" ad come up in the middle of that terrific May 7 Saturday Night Live. It would have been more fun to have seen her parodied in a skit on the show — she's just the kind of politician that SNL loves to lampoon. Then another Johnson ad showed up during 60 Minutes on Sunday night, May 8. She's definitely spending the $2 million Phil Knight has already poured into her campaign. We are not thinking she will be elected governor, but we are worried that she could tilt the win to the Republican candidate.

• Anyone else suspicious of Eugene Police Department's sudden inter- est in cracking down on University of Oregon parties? As intrigued as we are by the tales in EPD's press releases of moms defending their kids from party-busting cops, we can't help but to wonder why EPD is suddenly rushing to campus parties — at the expense of other calls, the police say — and calling in reinforcements from other law enforcement agencies when they didn't care about massive parties during the height of the COVID pandemic? Is there another "community safety" tax on the horizon? If EPD needs more money it would get more traction by asking folks to fund CAHOOTS.

• Remember Dillon Brooks when he played basketball for the Oregon Ducks? Now playing for the Memphis Grizzlies in the NBA playoffs against Golden State Warriors, he seems to be the bad boy, ejected and suspended for a game because of a flagrant foul that resulted in a fractured elbow for the Warriors' Gary Payton II. With the Trail Blazers out of it, we're cheering for Golden State, not Brooks — even if he is an old Duck.

• We were saddened to see that on May 7, former Eugene Weekly intern and freelancer Mike Bivins was arrested on charges of vandalizing Jewish temples and setting fire at a Muslim mosque in Portland. Those following him on Twitter had noted his social media posts becoming increasingly paranoid and erratic. Prior to his arrest, Bivins was well known in Portland for covering and filming street protests featuring clashes between right and left wing activists. He covered a 2016 pro-gun protest at the state Capitol for EW, and after wrapping up his 2015 internship, he mainly freelanced stories on cannabis until 2017.

The Perfect Sound: A Memoir in Stereo
Garrett Hongo

Pantheon Books, $30

The University of Oregon's distinguished professor in the College of Arts and Sciences and published poet Garrett Hongo is the stereo equipment guru with his circle of artist friends.

"I'm the go-to Ann Landers of audio lonely hearts," Hongo tells Eugene Weekly. "I have two Pulitzer Prize winners who call me up for advice, a McArthur fellow. I should ask them how to get a McArthur."

Hongo's newest book, The Perfect Sound: A Memoir in Stereo, dives into his passion as an audiophile. But it's not a memoir in the strictest sense, he says. Sure, the first section is, as he connects to his father's interest with audio equipment and his musical memories, but it also has broader reporting as he digs into the music world, such as the invention of the phonograph.

Hongo went on the quest to find the perfect audio system after experiencing an opera at La Scala. Around 2005, after years of an unlucky search for a decent stereo, a friend sold him a CD player and equipment and Hongo put in a Duke Ellington album. "It just knocked me out," he says. "It was like the notes were dancing in front of me." He called his friend, who then told him he was in for a good ride.

So he pitched writing about this audio ride to his book publisher, who he says then gave him a cash advance that covered the cost of a stereo amplifier.

The book about Hongo's audio equipment hobby helped him reconnect with memories of his father. In the first section of the book, Hongo writes about working with his father — who had lost a lot of his hearing either from his military service or from a childhood bout of scarlet fever — and reporting what he heard over the radio.

As Hongo listened to music, he says it reminded him of his life, which is captured in the book. "Doo-wop reminded me of my teenage years, Hawaiian of my childhood. So I started writing a narration of how I came up to when I became a poet." — Henry Houston

Free: Two Years, Six Lives, and the Long Journey Home
Lauren Kessler

SourceBooks.com, $26.99

Sociologists have called it "asynchronicity," or a lack of concurrence of time, and prisoners know this well.

Time is frozen for incarcerated men and women who have been inside cages and walls for years, even decades. Family relationships change and societal norms evolve, all on the outside, and when prisoners are released, they face a bewildering spectrum of choices the rest of us take for granted.

Lauren Kessler, a retired University of Oregon journalism professor who has worked with and written extensively about the incarcerated in Oregon, offers a deep dive into the lives of six people — four men and two women — who are re-entering society in her new book Free. It's a poignant look at how these six people are reclaiming and reshaping their lives in a challenging environment.

Eugene Weekly readers know of Kessler's work in this area. Before the pandemic suspended all volunteer programs at Oregon prisons, she led a creative writing program at the Oregon State Penitentiary in Salem. "Life Inside" took readers through the isolation and broken dreams of prisoners in spare and vivid detail.

Kessler notes to EW that three members of that group have been released "and we have continued and strengthened our relationship." She also, through conventional mail, helps with other members of the group on their writing journeys.

Kessler will appear at Tsunami Books 7 pm Thursday, May 19. She will be joined by Sterling Cunio, one of the six people who Kessler chronicles in Free. — Dan Buckwalter

Cross Purposes: One Believer's Struggle to Reconcile the Peace of Christ with the Rage of the Far Right
Bob Welch

Ragamuffin Books, $23.95

Former Register-Guard columnist Bob Welch suffered a personal crisis when confronted with the presidential candidacy of Donald Trump. A longtime evangelical Christian, Welch was having increasing difficulty reconciling basic Christian values — such as honesty, humility and generosity — with Trump's steady and dishonest stream of vitriol for immigrants, minorities, women and the poor.

Most of Welch's friends, and most evangelical church leaders, supported Trump, he writes in this remarkable new book. And Christian evangelicals — himself included — simply retreated into comfortable silence at the prospect of a Trump presidency.

Cross Purposes is at once a detailed history of the merging of far right and Christian politics and a memoir of Welch's sometimes uneasy dual life as an evangelical working for years in the largely liberal, thoroughly agnostic mainstream media. "My faith and my profession had long been at odds with each other, but Trump brought the simmering to a boil," he writes. "As an evangelical, I was scorned by the very media of

At 360 pages, this is a hefty book. But it invites deep skimming with its mix of personal anecdotes and occasional startling declarations. "I began wondering if evangelical churches today would welcome Jesus himself were He to show up," Welch laments at one point. "He might be considered too radical. Too woke."

Full disclosure: I worked with Welch at The Register-Guard, where for some years he was my editor in the features department. To be honest, without that experience I probably would never have read this book. But knowing Welch's deep integrity whetted my curiosity.

And it comes as no surprise to me that, in an afterword, he sketches out one final personal hope about Trump. "Can I forgive him?" Welch writes. "Can I pray that he might find the humility to allow God and others to matter to him more than himself? I hope so." — Bob Keefer

The Itinerant
Elizabeth Engstrom
IFDPublishing.com, $11.95 ($6.95 Kindle)

Imagine what life would be like if the pandemic had been worse. A whole lot worse.

Eugene horror and suspense writer Liz Engstrom has done just that, writing this novel well more than a year

Book Binge

Eugene-area writers have been on a roll in the past year. We check in on some of their recently published work

Perhaps there's something in the air. Maybe it's all that pandemic isolation. Or just possibly Eugene really is a great city of the arts and the outdoors, whether we have a city hall or not. Whatever the reason, local authors have produced a bumper crop of great new books in recent months.

There is serious nonfiction like Garrett Hongo's The Perfect Sound, detailing his epic quest to assemble a perfect hifi sound system, and former Register-Guard columnist Bob Welch's starkly confessional Cross Purposes, which charts his attempt as an evangelical Christian to come to terms with the radical right. There's deep escapist fiction like Liz Engstrom's The Itinerant, which imagines a plague hitting the U.S. (even though she wrote the whole thing before there was one). And there's nature, as seen through the eyes of hiking guru Bill Sullivan and Eugene Weekly nature columnist David Wagner. We got the books, and EW staffers read them. Here's what we found.

— Bob Keefer

before COVID-19 had even been identified and anyone outside of research labs was using the word “coronavirus.”

In The Itinerant, a brutal variety of flu has swept the world, leaving only small bands of survivors trying to make their way in a post-apocalyptic landscape. In the book’s prologue, Engstrom writes: “People wore masks for a while, but it didn’t seem to help. The virus came in on the wind, and if you got it you died, and died quickly... Governments were in chaos, blaming each other for biological warfare run amok. Some thought that the wealthier countries hoarded a cure, and as their governments collapsed, desperate rebel forces took control of the media and the militia.”

Sound at all familiar?

Former director of the Maui Writers Retreat and a founder of Wordcrafters in Eugene, Engstrom is an expert at suspense, with more than a dozen creepy novels and short story collections to her credit. The Itinerant, though, offers more than breathtaking chills and thrills as it works its way to a final spiritual resolution.

Just don’t read it if you’re wondering where your sudden hacking cough came from. — Bob Keefer

100 Hikes: Eastern Oregon

William L. Sullivan

Navillus Press, $19.20

This year brings a big event for those of us fond of poking around the eastern Oregon desert: Eugene hiking guru Bill Sullivan has updated his classic 2001 hiking guide to all that spacious country east of the Cascades. 100 Hikes: Eastern Oregon is 48 pages longer than the original 240-page volume, includes a lot of beautiful color photography of the region and offers such updated information as GPS coordinates for some of the places mentioned, which can be helpful when traveling those desert roads and trails less taken. He’s also changed up the selections a bit, for example dropping the 7-mile hike up Crooked Creek north of Lakeview from his top 100 (it’s now included in the 99 also-rans that follow the main list) but now including Chalk Basin near the Owyhee River. — Bob Keefer

A Lane County Almanac

David H. Wagner

Northwest Botanical Institute, $25

I have had the pleasure of editing and reading David Wagner’s short nature musings each month for more than a decade. Once I reached out to him about a peculiar phrasing, and he explained that tasked with writing a 250-word column, he religiously kept to the word count each time. That attention to detail marks his columns and his lovely book that stemmed from “It’s About Time.”

A Lane County Almanac brings together Wagner’s nature writing, where you might learn that Oregon’s white oak doesn’t leaf out until May, with gardening tips and scientific observations. You can read part 1, the almanac, monthly and see what nature, from the marvelous to the minuscule, to look out for, or you can read it like you might read the second half of essays — in small pleasant bursts. Wagner told me recently that A Lane County Almanac will serve as the ending punctuation for his long-running column. I am sad not to have his meditations on the natural world to look forward to each month, but can flip open my own copy of the almanac whenever I feel the need to ponder our local nature, and so, readers, can you. — Camilla Mortensen

Horses All Over Hell

Ryan Blacketter

Wipf and Stock, $14

Set in a small Idaho town, the vignettes that make up Horses All Over Hell are stark and vivid. Ryan Blacketter, an Iowa Writers Workshop graduate and Eugene-area writer, steps into the perspective of young Corey as he and his brother, Matt, watch their family deal with alcohol addiction and their mother’s dive into religion. Blacketter has a talent for mimesis — bringing scenes before the mind’s eye — and while the stories don’t have a traditional narrative arc, the dialogue and realism Blacketter presents are what make the narratives. Like his debut novel, Down in the River, which was set in Eugene, Horses All Over Hell is dystopian and ultimately somebody’s recognizable here and now.

Ryan Blacketter will do a meet and greet, and sign copies of Horses All Over Hell 1 pm-3 pm Saturday, May 21, at the Eugene Barnes and Noble, 1163 Valley River Drive. — Camilla Mortensen

Asante Riverwind has been an activist for decades on social and ecological issues, and he has often expressed himself on these issues through music, art and poetry. The two sides of the Eugene resident come together this month in Visions & Dreams — Nature & Spirit, an exhibition of Riverwind's paintings at Tea Chai Té. The colorful art that lines the walls depict much of the social and ecological upheaval that has rocked society in the past two years. There's a salute to Black Lives Matter, a painting that depicts the push and pull of wearing masks during the pandemic as well as paintings that remind viewers of the fragile threads of Earth in this global warming environment. Riverwind also has had exhibitions at Emerald Art Center, and he currently has unframed art for sale at New Zone Gallery.

SINGER, WRITER AND SPOKEN WORD ARTIST HENRY ROLLINS BRINGS HIS COMMENTARY TO EUGENE

By Henry Houston

"I believe in scientists," Rollins tells Eugene Weekly. "When Fauci speaks, I listen. I think he's looking out for me."

LRollins' body of work is diverse, from photography to writing to spoken word. But most people know of him as the frontman for the influential punk band Black Flag.

“I see the damage that [Ronald] Reagan did to dumb down the electorate,” he says. “When rational adults who can put on pants and drive can tell you that a vaccine can hold tiny tracking devices so that communist Joe Biden and his evil socialist henchmen can keep track of you, it’s like ‘Wow, that’s not smart. That’s just crazy.’”

The vaccine and masks have become heavily politicized, and he says he's watching a country not intellectually prepared for a pandemic at a time of deep political division. "I think we've stopped evolving. You have some groups who don't want to just stop, they want to go backwards to when all those women, gay people and nonwhite people knew their place," he says. "I just watched a country get a once-in-a-lifetime pandemic and hopefully once-in-a-lifetime president, and it's just this perfect storm of bad hitting stupid."

Rollins lives in Los Angeles near a gun range that was formerly a theater. The place is busy with people shooting guns, and he says it makes him wonder whether they just like shooting paper or if they're getting ready for something.

And he prefaces this by saying he's not a conspiracy theorist, but he wonders sometimes about some shooters there. "Someone put something in his mind and he's getting really good with that AR-15. By the fourth quarter of this year, there's going to be some awful headlines," he says. "I want to be wrong about this, but I think there's going to be some grown-ass men acting out this year because something is in their head."

At the same time as a touring musician, he says he's seen some of America's soul while on the road. "You'll never be cynical when you meet Americans in America," he says. Seeing a Walmart employee, 10 years older than you, wearing a back support brace stacking cans of applesauce at 4 am who also tells you to have a good night is the country's salt of the earth, he adds.

Travel has been a big part of Rollins' identity, whether he was sitting in a truck with "smelly guys of my band" or watching a 2 pm sunset in Denmark. But age is catching up with him, he says; at 61 he doesn't know if he has many trips left in him, especially with COVID complicating travel. "I don't know if I'll get back to Europe, and I will miss it," he says.

So he's left with the memories of international travel, especially with the Omicron variant canceling his February European tour dates. He refers to his travel memories as his "Wayback Machine." "I have a lot of fond memories of winter in Europe," he says. He remembers nights off performing and looking for restaurants that sold massive amounts of lasagna for cheap. "Sitting in a coffee shop in Moscow, St. Petersburg or Warsaw listening to the "Heroes" album by Bowie in my headphones."

Even though his travel days may be over, he spends time hosting bands traveling through L.A. It's what his mother did in the '80s for bands like Hüsker Dü, he says, so he's giving back to today's scene.

"I call it Dischord West," referring to a record label owned by his friend Ian MacKaye of Minor Threat and Fugazi. "I've had all kinds of musicians sleeping on my floor because I've slept on so many floors in my life." ■

Henry Rollins is 8 pm Thursday, May 14, at McDonald Theatre. Tickets start at $22.

Wow, look at you. you must have had one heck of a time at summer camp.

That's a laugh.

I spent the whole two weeks breaking my back for fifteen hour shifts in the stifling darkness, two hundred feet underground.

Really...? That far down?

We never went that deep back when I went to coal mining camp. I guess the local coal seams must be pretty played out by now.

Oh well. Next summer we'll send you to that slate quarry camp that I read about in Budget Parenting magazine.

FREE WILL ASTROLOGY

BY ROB BREZSNY

ARIES (MARCH 21-APRIL 19): “Choose the least important day in your life,” wrote Aries author Thornton Wilder. “It will be important enough.” I recommend that you make those your words to live by in the next two weeks. Why? Because I suspect there will be no tremendously exciting experiences coming your way. The daily rhythm is likely to be routine and modest. You may even be tempted to feel a bit bored. And yet, if you dare to move your attention just below the surface of life, you will tune into subtle glories that are percolating. You will become aware of quietly wondrous developments unfolding just out of sight and behind the scenes. Be alert for them. They will provide fertile clues about the sweet victories that will be available in the months ahead.

TAURUS (APRIL 20-MAY 20): “Every successful person I know starts before they feel ready,” declared life coach Marie Forleo. Author Ivan Turgenev wrote, “If we wait for the moment when everything, absolutely everything, is ready, we shall never begin.” Here’s what educator Supriya Mehra says: “There’s never a perfect moment to start, and the more we see the beauty in ‘starting small,’ the more we empower ourselves to get started at all.” I hope that in providing you with these observations, Taurus, I have convinced you to dive in now. Here’s one more quote, from businesswoman Betsy Rowbottom: “There’s never a perfect moment to take a big risk.”

GEMINI (MAY 21-JUNE 20): Poet Ranata Suzuki writes, “There comes a point where you no longer care if there’s a light at the end of the tunnel or not. You’re just sick of the tunnel.” That’s good advice for you right now, Gemini. The trick that’s most likely to get you out of the tunnel is to acknowledge that you are sick of the damn tunnel. Announce to the universe that you have gleaned the essential teachings the ride through the tunnel has provided you. You no longer need its character-building benefits because you have harvested them all. Please say this a thousand times sometime soon: “I am ready for the wide-open spaces.”

CANCER (JUNE 21-JULY 22): In the coming weeks, your imagination will receive visions of the next chapter of your life story. These images and stories might confuse you if you think they are illuminating the present moment. So please keep in mind that they are prophecies of what’s ahead. They are premonitions and preparations for the interesting work you will be given during the second half of 2022. If you regard them as guiding clues from your eternal soul, they will nourish the inner transformations necessary for you to welcome your destiny when it arrives. Now study this inspirational quote from poet Rainer Maria Rilke: “The future glides into us, so as to remake itself within us, long before it occurs.”

LEO (JULY 23-AUG. 22): “Remember that you will never reach a higher standard than you yourself set,” wrote author Ellen G. White. That’s true! And that’s why it’s so crucial that you formulate the highest standards you can imagine — maybe even higher than you can imagine. Now is a favorable phase for you to reach higher and think bigger. I invite you to visualize the best version of the dream you are working on — the most excellent, beautiful and inspiring form it could take. And then push on further to envision even more spectacular results. Dare to be greedy and outrageous.

VIRGO (AUG. 23-SEPT. 22): Before Virgo-born Leslie Jones achieved fame as a comedian and actor, she worked day jobs at United Parcel Service and Roscoe’s House of Chicken and Waffles. Her shot at major appreciation didn’t arrive until the TV show Saturday Night Live hired her to be a regular cast member in 2014, when she was 47 years old. Here’s how she describes the years before that: “Everybody was telling me to get a real job. Everybody was asking me, ‘What are you doing? You’re ruining your life. You’re embarrassing your family.’” Luckily, Jones didn’t heed the bad advice. “You can’t listen to that,” she says now. “You have to listen to yourself.” Now I’m suggesting that you embrace the Leslie Jones approach, Virgo.

LIBRA (SEPT. 23-OCT. 22): “A person must dream a long time in order to act with grandeur, and dreaming is nursed in darkness.” Author Jean Genet wrote that, and now I’m offering you his words as the seed of your horoscope. If you’ve been attuned to cosmic rhythms, you have been doing what Genet described and will continue to do it for at least another ten days. If you have not yet begun such work, please do so now. Your success during the rest of 2022 will thrive to the degree that you spend time dreaming big in the darkness now.

SCORPIO (OCT. 23-NOV. 21): “Cursed are those who feel floods but who can only express a few drops.” So says an internet proverb. Luckily, this principle won’t apply to you in the coming weeks. I expect you will be inundated with cascades of deep feelings, but you will also be able to articulate those feelings. So you won’t be cursed at all. In fact, I suspect you will be blessed. The cascades may indeed become rowdy at times. But I expect you will flourish amidst the lush tumult.

SAGITTARIUS (NOV. 22-DEC. 21): “It takes a great deal of experience to become natural,” wrote Sagittarian author Willa Cather. I’m happy to report that in recent months, you Sagittarians have been becoming more and more natural. You have sought experiences that enhance your authenticity and spontaneity. Keep up the good work! The coming weeks should bring influences and adventures that will dramatically deepen your capacity to be untamed, soulful, and intensely yourself.

CAPRICORN (DEC. 22-JAN. 19): “I intend to live forever,” proclaims 66-year-old comedian Steven Wright, who then adds, “So far, so good.” I offer you his cheerful outlook in the hope that it might inspire you to dream and scheme about your own longevity. Now is a great time to fantasize about what you would love to accomplish if you are provided with 90 or more years of life to create yourself. In other words, I’m asking you to expand your imagination about your long-term goals. Have fun envisioning skills you’d like to develop and qualities you hope to ripen if you are given all the time you would like to have. (PS: Thinking like this could magically enhance your life expectancy.)

AQUARIUS (JAN. 20-FEB. 18): “Stop insisting on clearing your head,” advised author Charles Bukowski. “Clear your f---ing heart instead.” That will be a superb meditation for you to experiment with in the coming weeks. Please understand that I hope you will also clear your head. That’s a worthy goal. But your prime aim should be to clear your heart. What would that mean? Purge all apologies and shame from your longings. Cleanse your tenderness of energy that’s inclined to withhold or resist. Free your receptivity to be innocent and curious.

PISCES (FEB. 19-MARCH 20): “The winner will be the one who knows how to pick the right fights,” wrote author Jane Ciabattari. Heed her advice, please, Pisces. You will soon be offered chances to deal with several interesting struggles that are worthy of your beautiful intelligence. At least one will technically be a “conflict,” but even that will also be a fruitful opportunity. If you hope to derive the greatest potential benefit, you must be selective about which ones you choose to engage. I recommend you give your focus to no more than two.

TRUSTEE'S NOTICE OF SALE Reference is made to that certain trust deed made by E&D Development LLC, as grantor, to Evergreen Land Title Company, as trustee, in favor of David Michalek, as beneficiary, dated December 3 2018, recorded December, 2018, in the records of Lane County, Oregon, as Document No. 2018-056228, covering the following described real property situated in said county and state, to wit: Parcels 2 and 3 of LAND PARTITION PLAT NO. 2018-P2822, recorded August 23, 2018, Reception No. 2018-039563, Lane County Deeds and Records, in Lane County, Oregon. Both the beneficiary and the successor trustee, Cassie K. Jones (appointed Successor Trustee in a recording filed in Lane County Deeds and Records as Document No. 2022-011834 on March 14, 2022) have elected to sell the real property to satisfy the obligations secured by said trust deed and a notice of default has been recorded pursuant to Oregon Revised Statutes 86.752(3) (recorded on March 14, 2022 in Lane County Deeds and Records as Document No. 2022-011835). There is a default by the grantor, performance of which is secured by the trust deed, with respect to provisions therein which authorize sale in the event of such default. The default for which the foreclosure is made is grantor's failure to pay when due the following sums: 1. Unpaid Principal; $175,400.00 2. Accrued and unpaid interest through and including March 1, 2022 (and continuing at the default interest rate of 18% or $86.50/day): $22,839.65 3. Late fees and penalties per contract: $29,835.00 4. Attorney Fees through February 22, 2021: $9,317.50 5. Trustee's Sale Guarantee Report: $675.00 6. Subtotal: $238,067.15. Because interest, late charges, attorney fees, and costs continue to accrue, the amount due on the day you pay may be greater. It will be necessary for you to contact the trustee before the time you tender the payoff amount so that you may be advised of the exact amount you will be required to pay. The maturity date of the obligation secured by the trust deed having Leela is an adorable 4-year-old poodle mix who is ready to shower a lucky human with all the love! Leela is an incredibly affectionate girl who aims to please. She loves treats and is ready to learn all the tricks! She is a very charismatic pup that radiates love! She can't wait to meet her family and becoming the best snuggle buddy. She is looking for an active family to take her on lots of hikes, walks, and engage her with playtime. A volunteer said, "Leela is so cute and bouncy. She leans against me for petting and tummy rubs." Leela does well with other dog friends but we recommend she is the only dog in the home to start out with. She could do ok with a dog savvy cat after a slow introduction period. She would love to be around children who can help her get her energy out but can respect her space. She has black fur, weights between 40-45 lbs., is spayed, microchipped, and up to date on vaccines. Whoever brings this girl home will be so happy they did!

Nothing in this notice shall be construed as a waiver of any fees owing to the beneficiary under the trust deed pursuant to the terms of the obligation which it secures. WHEREFORE, notice is hereby given that the undersigned trustee will on Wednesday, July 27, 2022, at the hour of 10:00 a.m., in accord with the standard of time established by ORS 187.110, at Lane County Courthouse, 125 E 8th Avenue, Eugene, OR 97401, in the City of Eugene, County of Lane, State of Oregon, sell at public auction to the highest bidder for cash the interest in the real property described above which the grantor had the power to convey at the time of the execution by grantor of the trust deed together with any interest which the grantor or grantor's successors in interest acquired after the execution of the trust deed, to satisfy the foregoing obligations thereby secured and the costs and expenses of the sale, including a reasonable charge by the trustee. Notice is further given that any person named in ORS 86.764 has the right, at any time prior to five days before the date last set for the sale, to have this foreclosure proceeding dismissed and the trust deed reinstated by payment to the beneficiary of the entire amount then due (other than such portion of the principal as would not then be due had no default occurred) and by curing any other default complained of herein that is capable of being cured by tendering the performance required under the obligation or trust deed, and in addition to paying those sums or tendering the performance necessary to cure the default, by paying all costs and expenses actually incurred in enforcing the obligation and trust deed, together with trustee and attorney fees. Pursuant to Oregon law, this sale will not be deemed final until the Trustee's Deed has been issued by the Successor Trustee. If any irregularities are discovered within 10 days of the date of this sale, the trustee will rescind the sale, return the purchaser's money and take further action as necessary. If the sale is set aside for any reason, including if the trustee is unable to convey title, the purchaser at the sale shall be entitled only to a return of the monies paid to the trustee. This shall be the purchaser's sole and exclusive remedy. The purchaser shall have no further recourse against the trustee, the beneficiary, or their agents. Without limiting the trustee's disclaimer of representations or warranties, Oregon Jaw requires the trustee to state in this notice that some residential property sold at a trustee's sale may have been used in manufacturing methamphetamines, the chemical components of which are known to be toxic. Prospective purchasers of residential property should be aware of this potential danger before deciding to place a bid for this property at the trustee's sale. In construing this notice, the singular includes the plural, the word "grantors" include any successor in interest to the grantors as well as any other person owing an obligation, the performance of which is secured by said trust deed, and the words "trustee" and "beneficiary" include their respective successors in interest, if any. Cassie K. Jones, Successor Trustee, P.O. Box 1147, Eugene, OR 97440, (541) 686-8833

SAVAGE LOVE

Real Worries

BY DAN SAVAGE

I'm a straight guy, married to a straight woman for 15 years. Several years back, I opened up to my wife about my fantasies of her sleeping with other men. I was nervous about bringing it up. Her views on sex had always been traditional, and she had always expressed a very strict idea of monogamy and commitment. So, I was extremely relieved when her reaction was intrigue rather than disgust. She was curious about it and wondered if I really wanted it to happen or if it was just something I wanted to keep in our rotation of dirty talk. Fast-forward to this week, and my wife tells me she is interested in exploring this. (Note to other guys who want this from their wives: be respectful, don't pressure and give her time to think about it. Your patience might be rewarded!) Here is the problem: We both have careers that could be complicated or damaged by the stigma around "cheating." I know about all the apps out there, but we live in a large city, and there is a non-zero chance that we might run into someone on the apps we are connected to professionally or socially. Are any of the apps out there geared toward folks who want to go about this carefully? Is it possible to minimize the risk of professional or social embarrassment here, or is this just something we must accept to pursue this lifestyle?

— Hooking Up, Seeking Help

There are lots of dating apps for people and/or couples looking for casual sex and/or kinky sex (Feeld, 3Somer, #Open, et al), and lots of people — single and partnered — looking for casual and/or kinky sex on regular dating apps (Tinder, OKCupid, Christian Mingle, et al.). But hookup/threesome/swinger apps, while perceived as sleazier, are a safer bet for a couple like you and your wife.

While there's no way to eliminate your risk of being recognized on an app, HUSH, anyone who spots you on Feeld looking for extracurricular dick was on Feeld looking for and/or offering up a little extracurricular dick of their own. The threat of mutually assured destruction — if they gossip about you, you'll gossip about them — is usually enough to restrain bad actors, as is the threat of the obvious follow-up question. ("Wait, why are you on Feeld?") And most people on hookup apps aren't bad actors, HUSH, but fundamentally decent people like you and your wife, i.e., singles and couples looking for a little fun, not for an opportunity to hurt anyone. A friend or a relative or a coworker who spots your wife in a bar with a strange man — or in the lobby of a hotel or on her way into your apartment — is more likely to cause you headaches than one of your fellow perverts online.

To minimize your risk of being spotted and outed on the apps, HUSH, don't post face pics and only share them after you've established — to the best of your ability — the person you're talking to isn't a bot, a pic collector, or an extortionist. Again, there's no way to fully eliminate the risk, but at a certain point you have to trust your gut and take a risk. You also have the option of creating a profile in a city you visit regularly but don't live in, HUSH. After you've found and vetted a few good candidates, get yourself some airline tickets and a hotel room and have those drinks in a bar that a colleague, a fan, or your father-in-law is unlikely to walk into.

There's a story making the rounds on Reddit about people getting those metallic "bejeweled butt plugs" all the way into their asses and needing pretty intense intervention to get them out, ranging from partners pulling them out with their fingers (the unfun kind of double penetration) to actual surgery in a hospital (only fun for a very select few). The blame, apparently, is the fact that the base of these toys is rarely wider than the widest party of the head, which is pretty damning, and that lubed metal is slipperier than lubed silicone. So here are the operative questions: Are metallic bejeweled butt plugs safe or not so much? Are silicone bejeweled butt plugs any safer? Are there any safe bejeweled butt plug options out there? The world isn't going to stop being obsessed with sparkly butt toys any time soon, so we're going to need to find a way to do it safely.

— Insertion Toy Extraction Messy Situation

I've seen those jeweled butt plugs in shops and in photos online — they're usually made from stainless steel and have glass "gems" mounted at the end of an alarmingly narrow base — but I've never actually seen one in person. Or in a person, at least not in person. But knowing what I do about butts (and how they relax after some play), and knowing what I do about plugs (a flared base is your first line of defense against a trip to the ER), I would've worried too much about losing one to use one. As for safe bejeweled butt plug options, ITEMS, you're going to want a flared base and a jewel that's at least the size of Cullinan I Diamond, the fist-sized rock on the Queen of England's royal scepter, which come to think of it...

As you've surely heard, the conservative Supreme Court majority plans to overturn Roe v. Wade. While my wife and I were lamenting the state of this fucking country, she mentioned that nobody ever hears men talking about the abortions that kept their lives on track — even though that's obviously a very common thing that happens. How many guys that their pants after a condom failed during sex with a woman they weren't that into? How many prominent men knocked up their mistresses or assistants or babysitters? How many Republican boys have pressed a wad of their parents' money into a girl's hand because having a baby would ruin his future? These men need to speak up. I'm not expecting actual Republicans to do so, but perhaps there are men out there who are willing to speak up and admit what we all know: Men benefit from abortion while bearing none of the shame associated with it. It's time we heard from them. I'm sorry I don't have a catchy name for this or a cute sign-off. I'm so tired and the world is falling apart.

— Men Should Speak Up About Abortion

Now for some real worries.

We are weeks away from American women being stripped of a fundamental constitutional and human right. And we face the prospect of an out-of-control and illegitimate Supreme Court stripping us of a host of other rights: the right to contraception, the right to same-sex marriage, the right to interracial marriage, even the right to have sex for pleasure — you know, the sex most people have most of the time. (In Lawrence v. Texas (2003), the Supreme Court struck down sodomy laws that criminalized not just consensual gay sex, but consensual sex between men and women that wasn't open to conception as well.)

While it should be enough to hear from women who've benefited from safe and legal abortion — and it should be enough to know that women die from unsafe and illegal abortions, and enough to know that banning abortions doesn't stop women from getting abortions — I happen to agree that cis men who support abortion rights and have benefited from them need to speak the fuck up about reproductive freedom.

"There are millions of men whose lives would have been worse without abortion," the writer Jill Filipovic wrote on Twitter last week. "Men who wouldn't have found their big loves, wouldn't have their kids, wouldn't have been as successful, wouldn't have taken big risks" if they had become fathers before they were ready. To those men, to all men, Filipovic says, "This if your fight, too. Get in it."

And gay men? The exact same arguments being used right now to strip women of the right to decide when and whether they want to bear a child — abortion isn't within the "history and traditions" of the United States, abortion isn't a right enumerated in the Constitution, abortion is a moral question — can and will be used to strip us of the right to have sex and the right to marry. Republican assholes are passing laws in red states right fucking now that force women to give birth to their rapists' babies against their will. Don't for a second think these same assholes won't pass laws forcibly ending your gay marriage or throwing your gay ass in jail for getting your gay ass fucked. This is our fight, too, faggots.

Is there a website where we can legally find out how to buy the abortion pills you've mentioned on the podcast?

— Make It Stop

Everything you need to know about abortion pills — how they work and where to get them — can be found at Plancpills.org. And anyone using those pills at home needs to read Dr. Jen Gunter's essay "Your Medical Team Cannot Tell If You Had a Self-Administered Abortion" at Vajenda.substack.com. And everyone should read Jill Filipovic's advice on what we can do right now to fight back ("Get To Work, Get Informed, Get Brave") at Jill.substack.com. And if you can afford to donate to the National Network of Abortion Funds, now would be a great time to do so. They're at Abortionfunds.org. And finally: don't vote Republican, don't fuck Republicans.
